

UBISOFT REPORTED
A UBER SECURITY INCIDENT

Global gaming giant Ubisoft reported a uber security incident last week that temporarily disrupted some games, systems, and services. They haven't notified who was responsible yet.

Digits will allow you to complete your missions in style!

They said “at this time there is no evidence any player personal information was accessed or exposed as a by-product of this incident” and also added that games and services are now functioning normally. Out of caution, the company also had initiated a company-wide password reset.

While it has not directly claimed responsibility, the South America-based Lapsus$ hacking group shared the news on Telegram with a smirking face emoji, suggesting that they may have been the culprit.

The group later commented in the same thread that it had not been targeting Ubisoft customer data.

